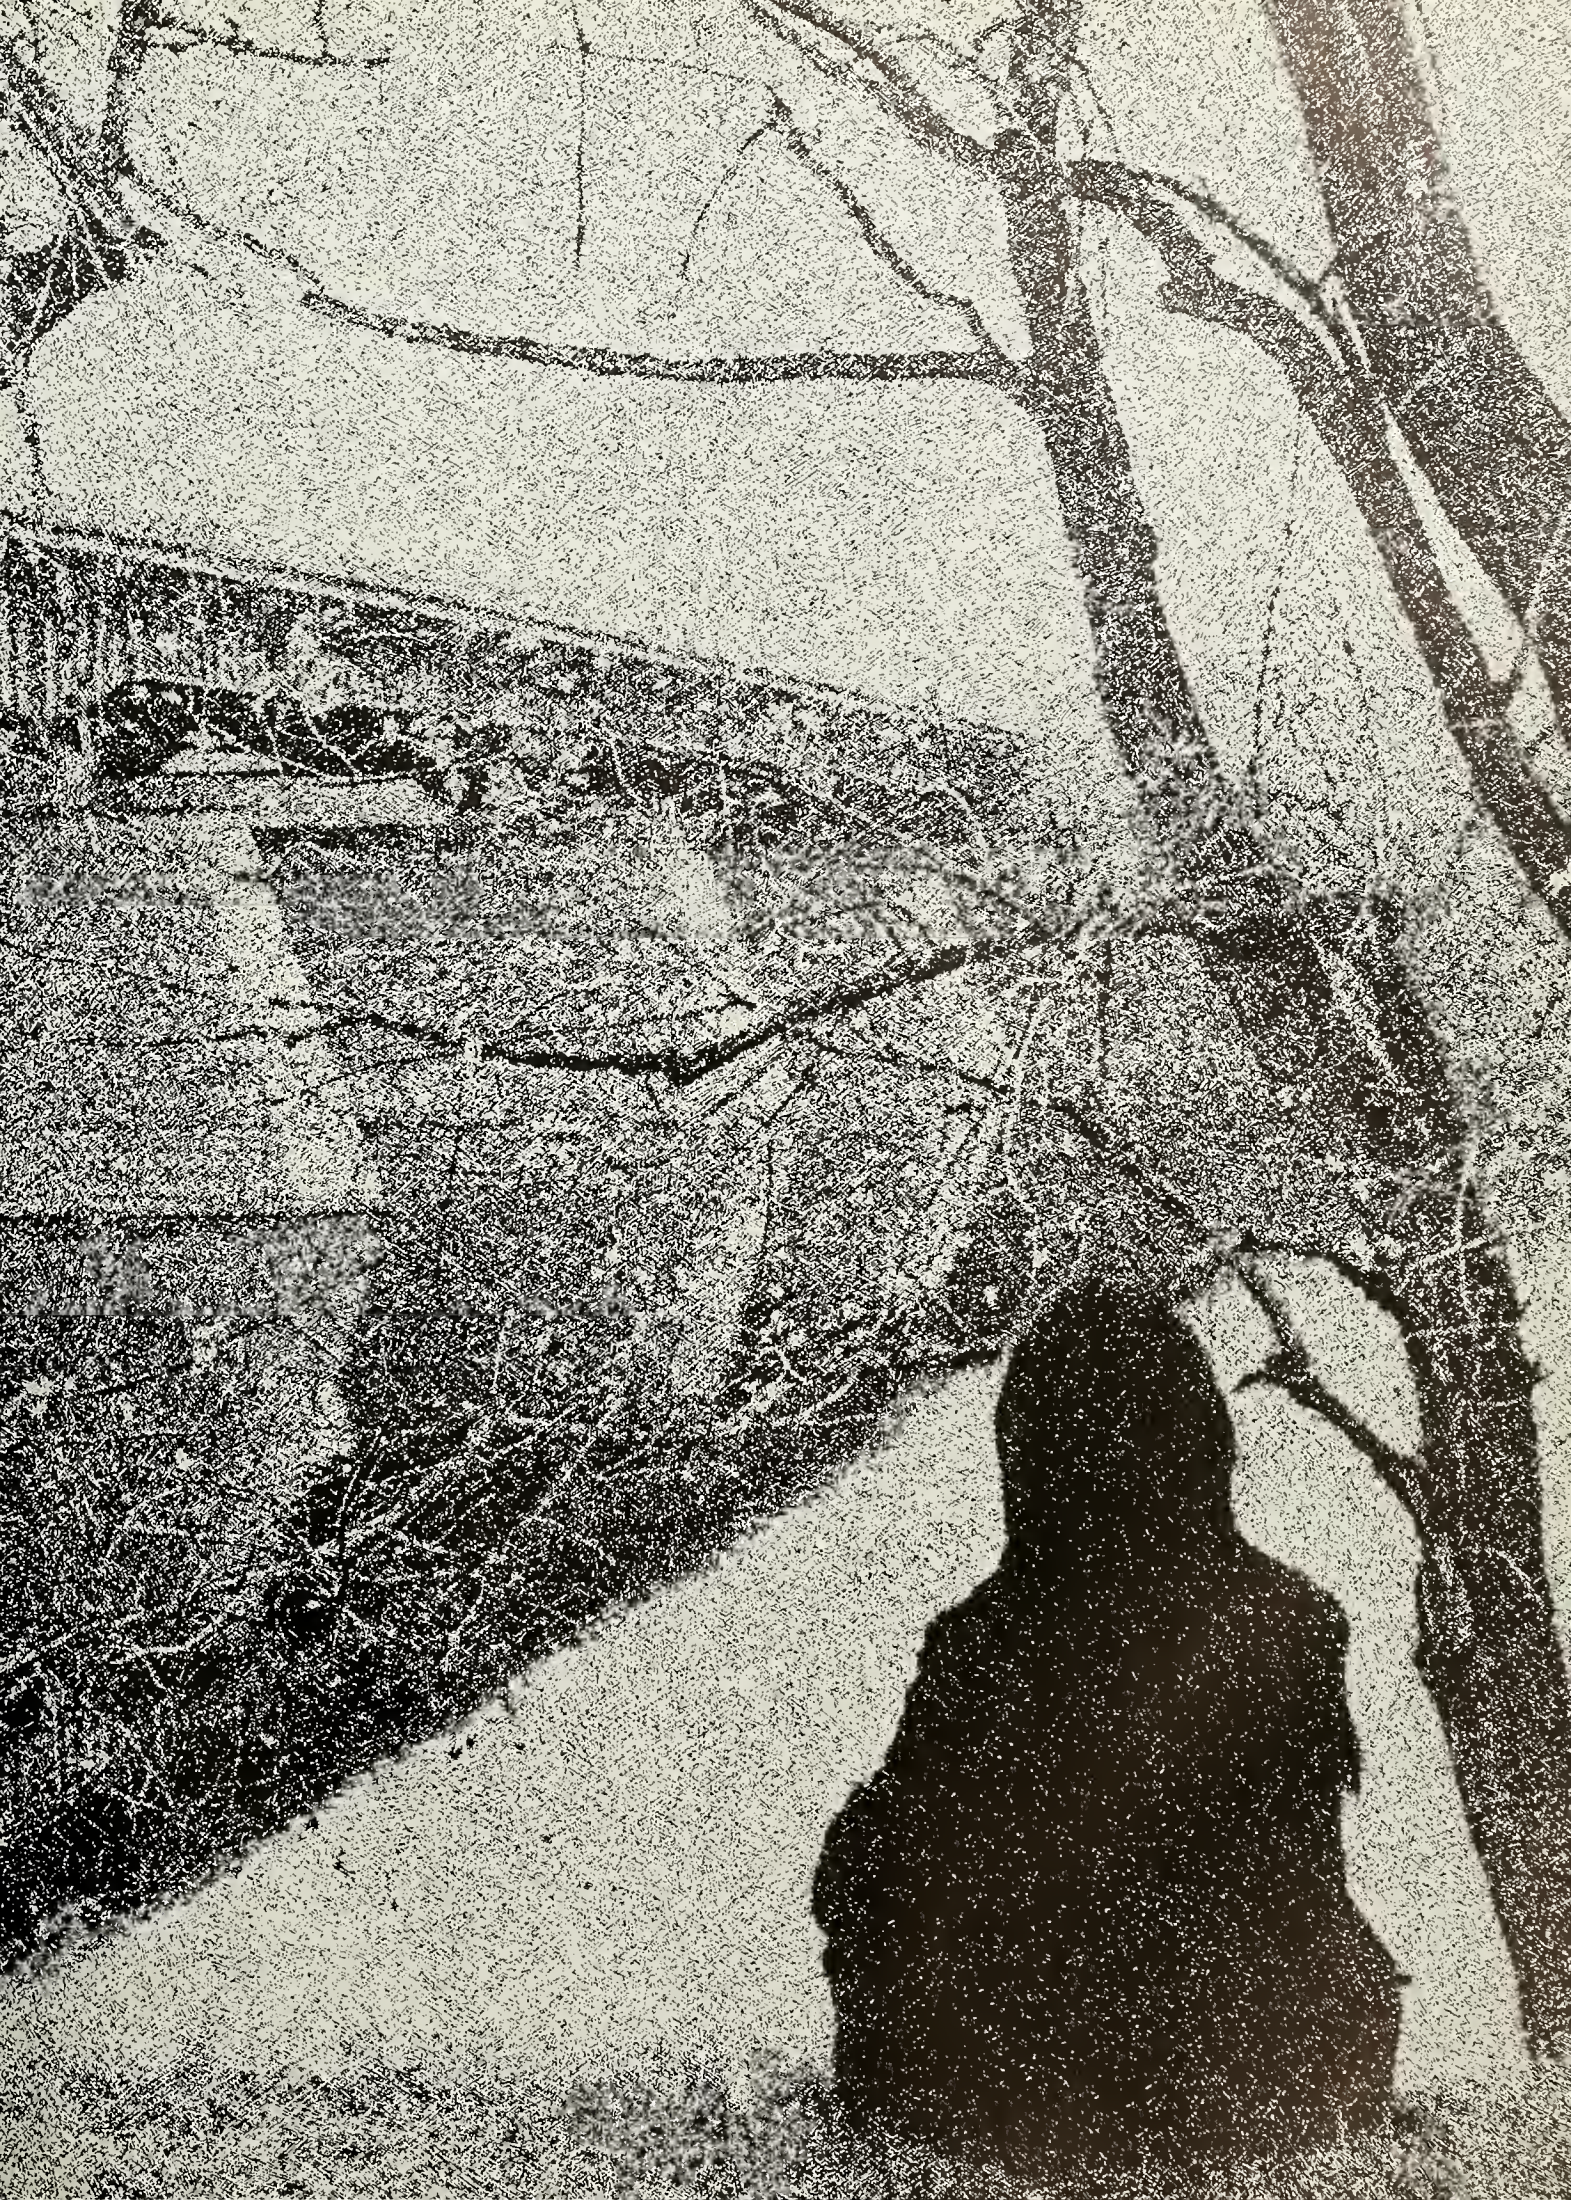
Song of Exile

I will be the one
to build the bridge
but you must promise
you will cross
it when it's done
that you will join
me at its weakest link
and arm-in-arm
we'll lean upon
the strongest railing
with our other arms
deep in the river
smoothing with our fingers
the precise location
where the current
is more apt to stray
and where a bridge
has never justified
a river's mystery.

F. E. Mello
Aug. 1968



An untrodden path

echoes the silence of emptiness

Still
and polished
yet heavy
like a dream
e c h o i n g . . .
b e c k o n i n g . . .

Buildings are only the shell of learning.

The foundations of self discovery rest in MAN.

1970
And so you came,
again crossing varied paths Alone, often, you will reflect in silence on your dreams . . .

Carrying things of the past Treasuring hopes of future bridges
you alone will have to build.
You together will emerge carpenters,
of the future . . .

Keeping the symbols of childhood . . .

Slowly making the transition.

Cartons,
clutter,
and bare walls
soon

Metamorphose
into a whole,
an expression
of you.

Bulging stacks and hanging racks of texts and learning tools . . .

bridging the skinny aisles . . .

remnants of the old . . Bookstore.

Moments of suspended silence . . .
a professor becomes a part of the scrambled
expressions . . .
the mind gropes
wanders
grasps . . .
beyond the studious halls and walls . . . to form
forms . . .

The sounds of the classroom —
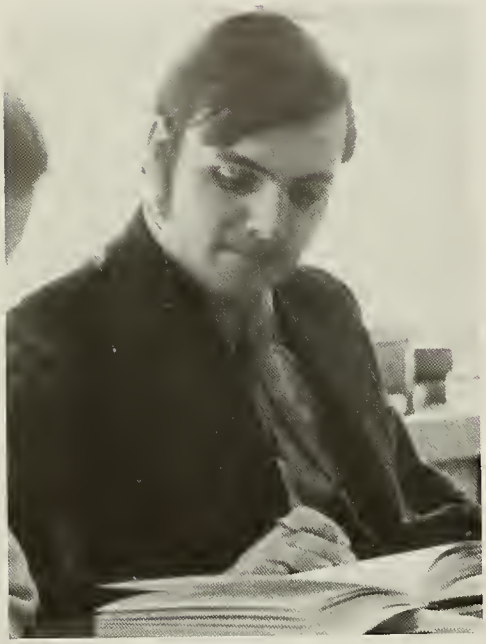
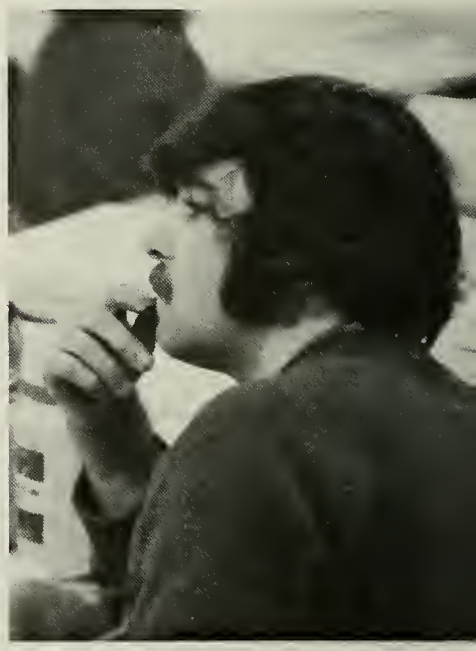
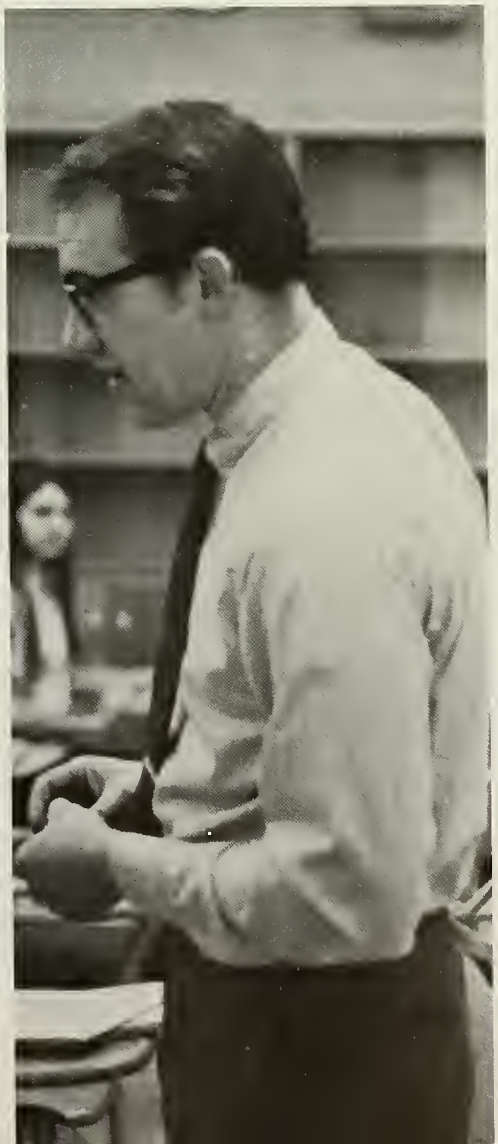
Infinitely in motion,





At times atomistic and
quiet,
And often noisy.



The questioning,
The answering,
Laughter subsides
And experience is shared.
Both teacher and student are one —
The communion of the classroom.

Emptiness lingers . . .

Drawing people together . . .

Laughter filling the soul . . .

Food, the body.

Enveloping silence
on the outside
masks activity
within . . .
people doing sharing seeking . . .
personal fulfillment . . .

basking in the quivering
satisfaction of doing . . .

and being . . .

And there were the moments
of concentration and silence
as the mind
raced to piece
bits of information
together.
More mysteries met us as we crossed bridges.

And moments we shared in silence we also shared in laughter . . .

Judo, a modern form of jujitsu . . . the art of having your opponent use his own strength against himself . . .

Soft and yielding
the body slips
easily but smiles
of incredulous
awareness remain . . .

A well-disciplined Westfield soccer team yielded an impressive 15-1-1 record.

Although the team was not given a tournament berth, its loyal fans clearly showed who they thought were number one.

Countdown — 100 . . .
It's the magic night.
As almost anything goes . . .

The Carriage Lounge is overflowing
with a "Senior" atmosphere —
The spirits are bright, friendly,
and often overpowering!

Couples emerge, groups gather,
toasts are voiced . . .

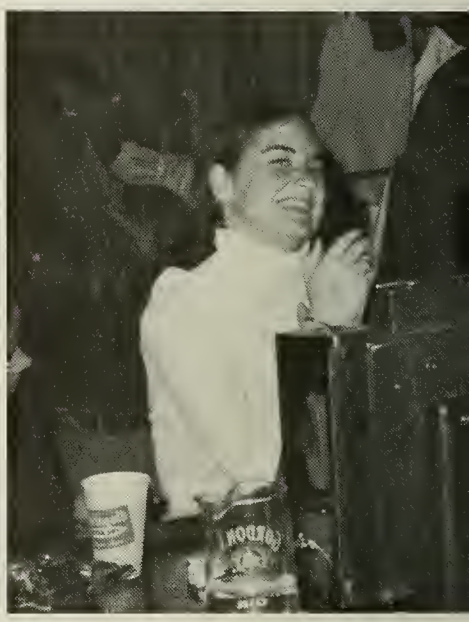
The feeling is communicated by all —

So near, yet so far away . . .

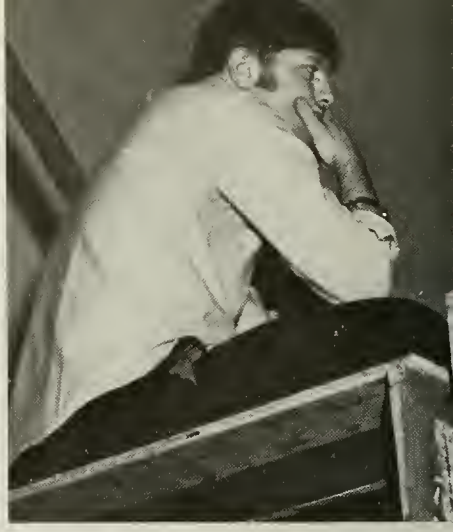
So tangible, yet so fleeting . . .

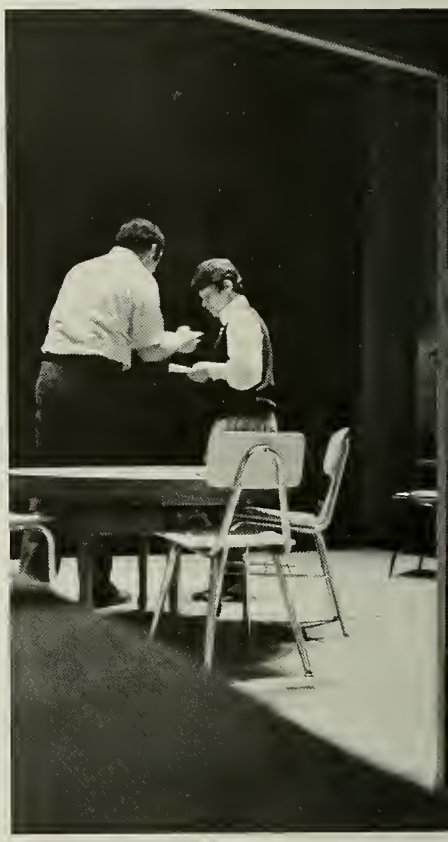
The Senior crowd continues to gather —
And the spirits slide down,
As the variation of faces end
the infamous one-hundred day mark.

Class starts at 8:30 tomorrow!



WESTFIELD
STATE





Woven intricately
were men and women
Floodlights and footlights

And they bridged the chasm
between the twelve year
dream and reality

A View From The Bridge opened new vistas and many hearts — For three nights the curtain call brought standing ovations.

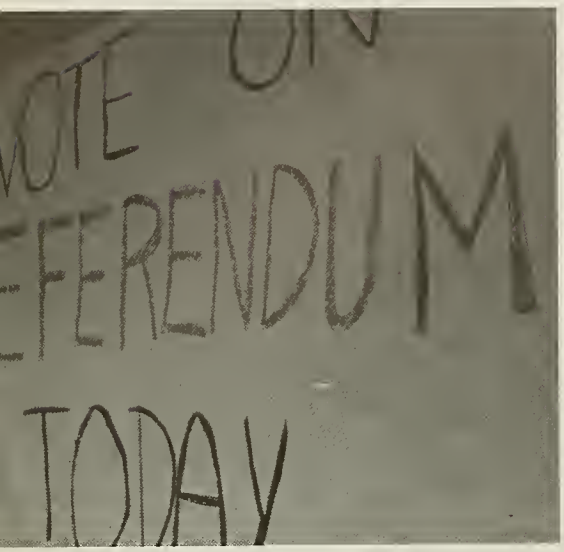
The Spring of 1971 brought forth an annual evening of maddening . . .

fun as the faculty played their "game".

We wrote, two walked
and in Boston
We all rallied and lobbied

Organization and unity
in May 1971
melted obstructions . . .
frustrations . . .



And violence was
averted at WSC

TARY

May brought us many things —
one being the Harvey Allen Annual Spring Frolic!

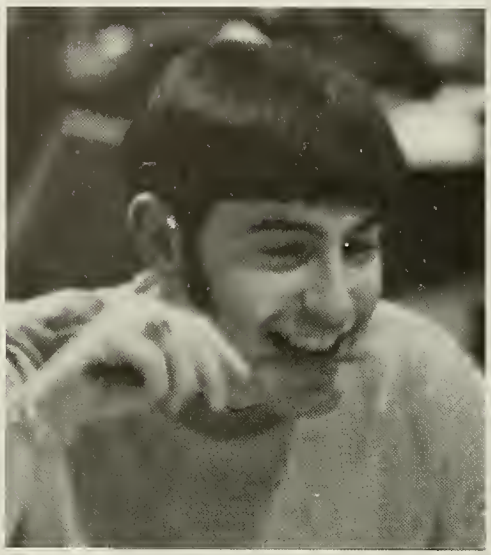
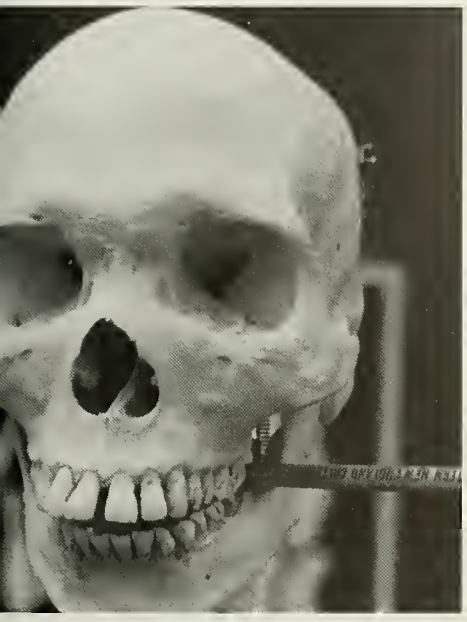
Now familiar faces
Laughing, Questioning, Waiting
For four years . . .

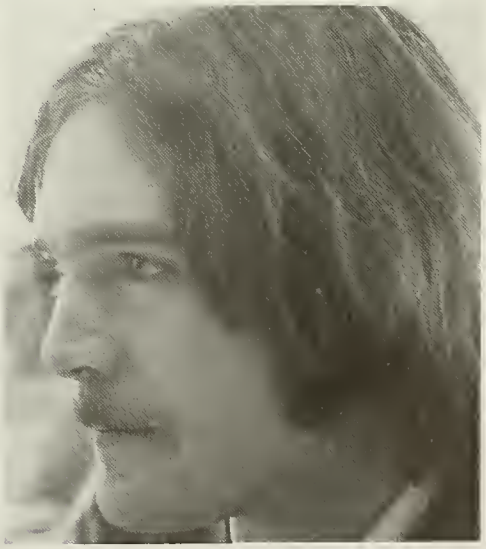
Today's intimate visages
Crying, Doubting, Living
Until tomorrow . . .

How soon will they fade
Into a blur
Of yesterdays?



A striking resemblance,
A sudden remembrance,
A lasting friendship . . .





Portraits of yesterday
Painted on the mind
Create visions of tomorrow.

Intramural softball 1971 brought many to the pitcher's mound and the outfield and places in between — Spring beckons us to motion

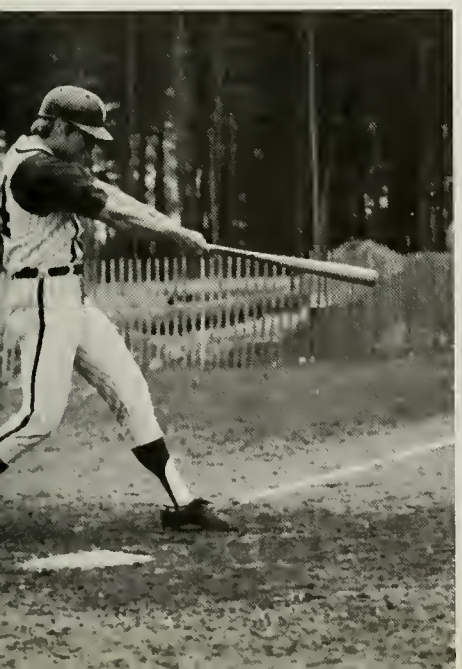
as the Earth awarkens.

The 1971 Student Senate Awards Banquet was a thought-filled time and none sensed that the year's end had actually put its first foot forward.

many plans unfulfilled remained for us to carefully execute.

We realized we weren't as bound as was Prometheus; we came not to destroy but to fulfill.

Baseball Season opened; again the patterned synchronized movements were realities as . . .



uniformed players
glided from base to base
After a small white object was sometimes caught
and sometimes irretrievably lost.

Action was tense on ye olde soccer field

the bats were flying
As the balls went zooming.

Scrape —
right into home plate
And the softball intramurals
came to a home running end

May brought finals

Books and thoughts
are in simplistic wedlock.
Everyone in their own way
searches for a study habit
during the final exam game.
All with the same climax –
Late awarded sleep.

Emptiness is speechless
as the last student looks beyond the panorama of Closed books, empty classrooms, foodless cafeterias, and
      a quiet campus.
Summer's sweetness awaits . . .

The lines and black linear formations disguise the varied hues of differences we each have brought forward to this particular day in June. Together, we have witnessed an unprecedented year and often we have mutely watched the changes in our lives as we have the changes of the seasons — with awed detachment.

This year does not mark a year of unique brotherhood for us — we have always been, and will forever be, brothers and sisters of an enduring universe.

This year then but marks the arbitrary passing of four years — man's years. Years are our starlite bridges spanning the infinite chasms in the Universe. What our bridges have endeavored to reach — in short, our raison d'être — will have to bear the test of time; together we must lean against this weakest of links, in an ever changing Universe.

All has been shared,

As the recessional starts . . .

But it is not yet over!

Convocation marks the opening of the four year culmination —

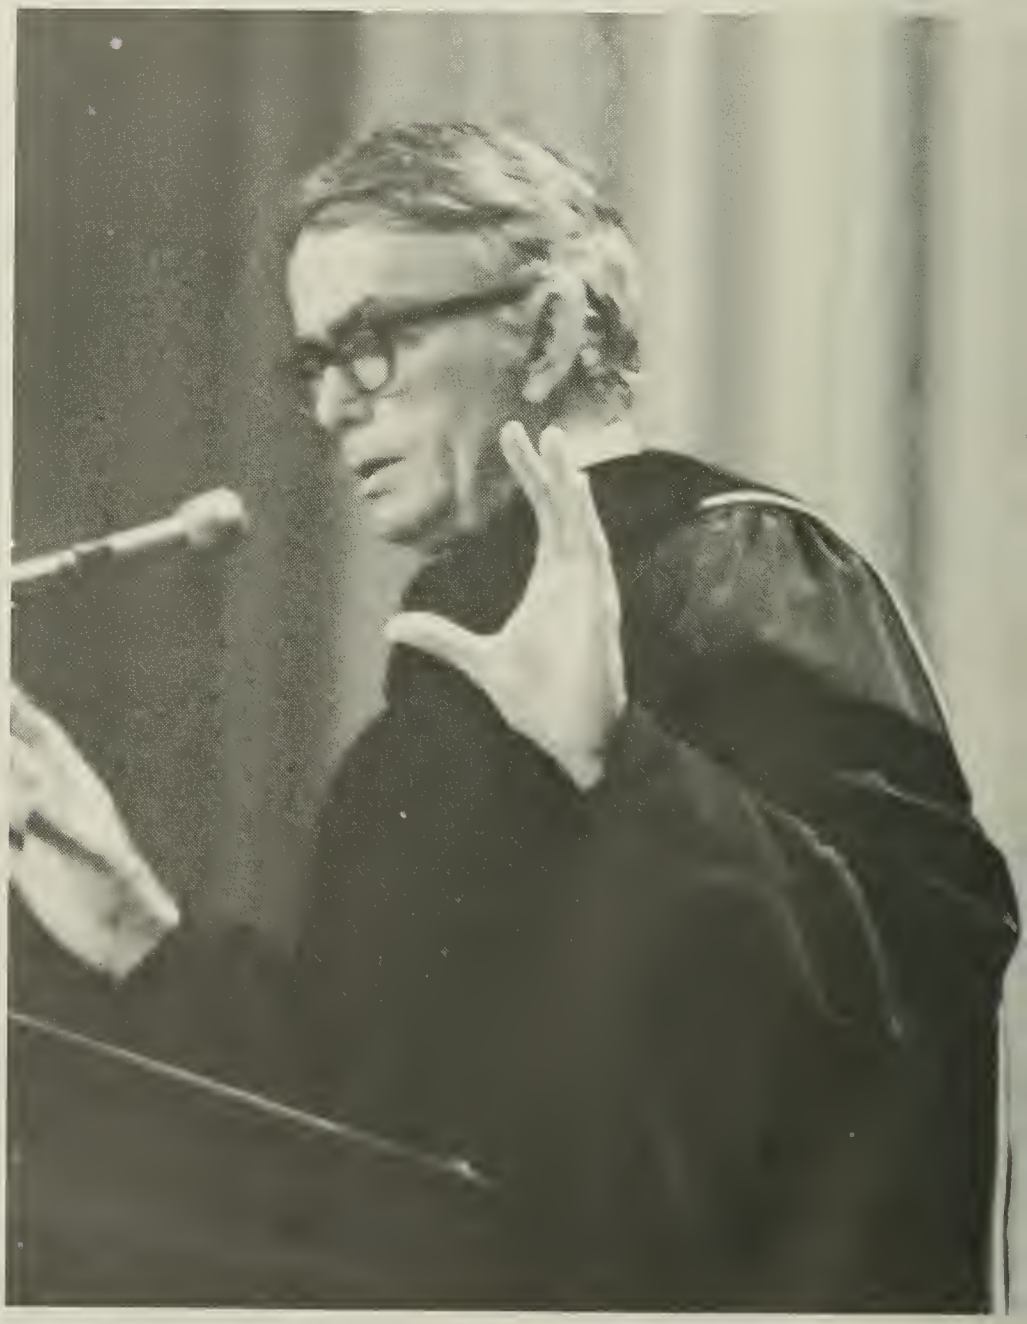
GRADUATION!



Bachelor, Master, Doctorate —

All harmoniously sharing the joy of cap and gown.

Anxiety, thoughts, frustration . . .

A breath of meaning and fortitude

Flows forth from Dr. Patterson

A moment of song and glee

Spotlighting the climax.

The 1971 Senior Faculty Tea scheduled as tradition at Westfield was held . . .

Yet sombre faces indicated heavy thoughts and memories that drifted over the mountains of memory from four years of yesterdays.

The Saturday before . . .

Graduation
June 13, 1971

Presidential Interview

President Leonard J. Savignano

QUESTION: What changes of major importance have occurred at Westfield since the Class of '71 entered as freshmen?

PRES. SAVIGNANO: I think there have been many important changes. They fall into two rather specific areas of growth: one is academic, and the other is physical. In the academic area, as you know, we have now new majors in many of the liberal arts, a new major in physical education, a new major in art, a new major in music and a new major in general studies. These will give a greater opportunity for academic variety and will provide for the skills which come to our campus with our students. We are away from the narrow, restrictive courses of the past. The second major change, of course, has been the new buildings. Education today is very complex. It does require specialized rooms, specialized equipment, and specialized facilities. The advent of the new Ely Library and Student Union and the new science building will provide our students with A-Number One facilities to their studying. As you know, the dormitories have given us more opportunities for on-campus living for students, and on-campus living is a major portion of education.

QUESTION: While the enrollment figures on college campuses increase each year, how do you view the quality of education here and in our nation?

PRES. SAVIGNANO: I don't know that I can substantiate this statement with research on the subject, but it seems to me that we have two extremes which accompanied the numerical growth. We have on our campus, as well as other campuses, some of the most capable, dedicated and outstanding students I have met in my twenty-five-plus years of education. These young people are far surpassing, or at least equal in any way, the students that I have encountered prior to coming to Westfield. On the other hand, there is also an extreme at the lower level, a group of students who do not seem to have any direction. They do not seem to have any desire and have been failing in numbers. This is not to say that these young people don't have ability. They certainly had all the requirements to enter our college, but somewhere along the line the motivation which is required for continuation and graduation from college was lacking. Whether this reflects world conditions or their own personal situation, I really don't know.

QUESTION: What will be the effects of the Secondary Education Department's new accreditation for Westfield graduates entering the field of education or graduate school?

PRES. SAVIGNANO: Of course, this is one of the fine things that has happened to Westfield College during your stay. We now have full accreditation for the Secondary Education Department. This is a mark of excellence and a mark of academic accomplishment. As a result, our people can match strides, can match background, and can match preparation with any candidate for secondary employment. This is true also when it comes to an application for graduate school. A college which lacks the accreditation that we have finds that its students are not as welcome, not as respected, and there is a definite hardship. This is one single, very important plus-factor in favor of our students and our college.

QUESTION: If the trend today in education is toward the liberal arts, how will this trend influence teacher-training programs?

PRES. SAVIGNANO: There is a tendency perhaps to indicate or to lump all teacher preparation into one category, and that's liberal arts. I just don't happen to believe this is the trend. For secondary-school teachers and Community Colleges teacher preparation there is a very definite need for liberal arts training. The preparation of teachers for the elementary level does require special teacher education. It is not as dependent on a liberal arts background as is the preparation for secondary teachers. Therefore, our plan has been to give a wider liberal arts background for our secondary teachers. We have done that, and we have gained accreditation in all our areas.

QUESTION: The Bureau of Labor Statistics show that between 1968-80 there will be 4.2 million teachers to fill 2.4 million teaching positions. What are the implications of these statistics for Westfield graduates entering the teaching field each year?

PRES. SAVIGNANO: In my opinion, this will have a very definite effect on our graduates. However, the picture isn't quite what the figures would reveal. For example, there are overages in certain areas. There are, and will continue to be, definite shortages in specific and specialized areas of education. For example, it is difficult to find the number of properly trained nursery and kindergarten teachers which are required in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts alone. Teachers for the handicapped — that is, the physically handicapped, the mentally retarded, the emotionally disturbed — are at a premium. It is almost impossible to hire these people. There is a great shortage in music supervisors. Girls' physical education teachers are very much at a premium. They are scarce, and very few people are entering that field. It means this — that to be employed you have to be a good student with proper preparation. It means that as the students do prepare for teaching they must find the areas in which there are shortages. There are many shortages. This has been the motivating factor in the changing and adding of new majors for Westfield State College. We know what the shortages are going to be, and we are trying to prepare teachers so that they will gain employment and will not join the group of unemployed. Even more important, they will contribute to the education of the young people of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
